

The summer plans are well in shape and seem to point to a brighter season socially than Salt Lake has enjoyed for some time. Already the Amelia Palace has been put in readiness for the arrival of Mrs. Holmes, Colonel Holmes having spent the past three weeks here in charge of the spring renovation. As Mrs. Holmes comes back greatly improved in health and happily out of her mourning, and is to be accompanied by a young guest, the scene will be the scene of some entertaining which it has not known for many months. Several of the leaders in the social world are not planning any lengthy stay away from town, but will keep their homes in readiness and only run back and forth between town and country houses.

The wooden, tin and china weddings of this season vie with the real thing and touch pretty close to the June idea these days. The idea seems to be when the match doesn't last that long to keep quiet about it, but when by force of circumstances or a conservative environment it has hung on for a certain period it must be noted as exceptional.

The man has departed to a new field, and before he left he is said to have announced to his close friends that he had not been caught by the lady fair. She was surprised to learn it in that manner, for "It isn't on record the lady tried."

Although there will be few Salt Lakers to go directly west, a general out-going toward the southern part of California will take place during the present month. Long Beach and Venice seem to be the favorite destinations sought, a whole colony of teachers going to the first named place.

Quite a party of Salt Lakers will go to the Hermitage today to see how Ogden canyon looks in its early summer clothes. The trip may still be made by motor cars and busses although the railroad is partly done.

If the plans of the Country club committee come out all right they may get to the matter of giving dances, teas, table d'hôte dinners and the like some time before the end of the summer. But "The June days are passing."

Some times even the manly soul enclosed within a stiff bosom has to resort to the feminine pin in order to make both ends meet. At a recent affair it became necessary to join forces of vest and said bosom by means of the disposed of man, a pin.

A tour of France in an automobile built for speed, comfort, and four is to be the summer diversion of a popular Salt Lake girl.

One young man of the town is planning matrimony with a really sensible reason in his head. He says he wants to be married so that he may get the reputation of being a married man.
